TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.

[From the Richmond Dispatch, May 9th.]

General according to date on Saturday, by the Court of the Department of the Northern District of Georgia.

From Richmond.

Richmond, May 8.—Reinforcements from Gen. Lee, dated 9 A. M., Sunday, says that yesterday the enemy from Spotsylvania C. H. made repeated, by reported reinforcements, but were repulsed with heavy loss. They still remained in our front, but were again handsomely driven back.

Nothing definite from Hanover, but the rumor that the enemy shelled our rear at Port Walthall this morning.

Gen. Stuart's funeral took place this morning and Gen. Jenkins' will take place this afternoon. The members of Congress attended in a body.

THE DIAMOND WEDDING.—One reads of a thousand and one things, but we never heard before of the fashion of "Diamond Wedding" in New York at which a Miss Bartlett bargained herself away to the highest bidder—a wife for a captive from Cuba.

The correspondent of the Milwaukie Wisconsin writes from Havana as follows:

It will be remembered that when the Cuban Ovindo married Miss Bartlett of New York, it was reported on account of the Diamond Wedding." Well, the Diamond Wedding." Has the wife of Ovindo been ransomed? All was to the wife by the Spanish authorities, and was to be delivered to her husband on the payment of the ransom. What of him? Why, he is still in the dungeons of Moro Castle, and will remain there until the ransom is paid. The Diamond Wedding" was a failure. Ovindo is a prisoner of war, and will be treated with the consideration due to his rank. He is not very [illegible] and is quite comfortably provided for. He has been married for [illegible] years, and has a family of children. Those who have married for money [illegible] and quite [illegible] her own, but still [illegible] low children. From all I have learned, I am led to conclude that Ovindo [illegible] to his wife—[illegible] does not assure him of [illegible] among the fine ladies of Havana.

AN AMERICAN LAWYER AT THE FRENCH COURT.—The Emperor and Empress not infrequently take a great fancy [illegible] presented to them, invite them to [illegible] parties, make much of them, and sometimes raise a little jealousy, by so doing, among the [illegible] belonging to the Court.

Among [illegible] was formerly a member of Congress and now in the lower circle of the diplomatic body, under some [illegible] appointment, [illegible] darling wife. In a gentleman, [illegible] a very [illegible] and [illegible] hair. After a party [illegible] in the Emperor's drawing [illegible] the Imperial [illegible] and [illegible] an exquisite [illegible] party, thereby [illegible] party.

During the supper one of the Empress' [illegible] began [illegible] to [illegible] Mr. [illegible] about her [illegible] declaring that [illegible] found grey [illegible] a luxurious mass of [illegible] and twisting her [illegible] to be sporting [illegible] to the [illegible] declaring, Mrs. [illegible] only possessed [illegible] such as it was, was [illegible] and truly [illegible] of gentility, and that of purchased [illegible]

All present [illegible] in the [illegible] Empress, some declaring for the [illegible] of hours, the others for that of Mrs. [illegible]. The Empress and Empress gravely adverted to the different [illegible] and [illegible] the Empress, declaring that it was clearly impossible to get at the truth in any other way. [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] to settle the controversy by [illegible] her hair, and giving [illegible] demonstration of its [illegible] her own.

The lady thereupon [illegible] and [illegible] and the hair pins that held up her [illegible] and [illegible] its heavy and shiny masses all over her shoulders, thus giving conclusive proof of the correctness [illegible] the ladies. As French women seldom have good heads of hair, it is probable that many [illegible] disappointment they have been caused to [illegible] the ladies by this magnificent [illegible] of hair displayed by Mrs. [illegible] but the gentlemen were all so [illegible] the really beautiful spectacle, the lady's husband, who worships her, being so proud of her triumph as though his wife's luxuriant locks were his own addition.—Cor. BILL ARP ON THE CURRENCY ACT.—This droll genius, writing to the Atlanta Intelligencer, says:

It is whispered around in many parties (that's how I came to hear it) that this bill was not been passed, but Mr. Memminger lost his abstract book, when they had the last big skeer in Richmond, and he has formed longrem that the war no way to tell how much money was out, without calling it all in again. He was urged to his task how much he thought was in circulation, and he said he hadent charged his memory particular, but according to the best of his recollection there was six hundred millions or six thousand millions—he wasent sure which.

Lincoln has got tired of the White House, and is having another building erected in the suburbs of Washington. No doubt the old lady is at the bottom of it. The White House is to be used as a Department of State, and for official receptions.
